Excerpt: . . . 11 port about 4, 000 scientists in over 100 universities and nine DOE national labora-tories. In this hearing I hope to get a better understanding of what fundamental questions remain to be answered, and what the American taxpayers are receiving in return for this investment. This Subcommittee certainly supports exploring fun-damental areas of science with uncertain or even unknowable outcomes, but the level of that support should always be well-justified. The Administrations High En-ergy Physics Advisory Panel made important progress in this direction with the re-lease of its 10-year strategic plan, which set research and project priorities under a series of realistic budget scenarios. I look forward to learning more about whether and how this plan is being implemented. The prepared statement of Mr. Costello follows: REPARED TATEMENT OF EPRESENTATIVE ERRY OSTELLO P S R J F. C Good morning. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, for holding todays hearing to receive testimony on...
