Createspace. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 314 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 0.7in.A Leaf That Floats upstream is a readable, straight from the shoulder Narrative Non-Fiction book which examines issues which constitute the threat that civilization is posing to the future of the Human Race and all life on Earth. Do we want to provide an environment and a society which will be safe and suitable for our children and those not yet born, or shall we allow arrogance avarice and apathy make the choice for us All around us the deterioration of the Eco-system and our environment is obvious, morality is at an all-time low and almost every country on the Planet is so burdened with debt that their citizens are being taxed out of existence. The institutions and organizations which form the basis for our society are out of control, are they working for us, or against us Are the people we appoint to look after our interests, to provide for our well-being, working for us or for themselves You dont have to look far to find the answer to that question. Everywhere you look; there is dissatisfaction as people begin to realize they have become numbers on a ledger, that as people their value had been reduced to virtually nothing. Is there anything we, the grass-roots people of this world can do about what we see happening. Perhaps, just reading this book will make that clearer. I make no apology for the fact this book is contentious and controversial, it is meant to be, it is written to shock people out of their lethargy and raise awareness, for a very simple reason. That which we live with every day becomes invisible, we become oblivious of the obvious. We banish our...
